- 1 Which specific constitutional amendment fundamentally altered Bangladesh's parliamentary democracy into a one-party presidential system under the Bangladesh Krishak Sramik Awami League (BAKSAL) in 1975?
- A First Amendment
 - B Second Amendment
 - C Third Amendment
 - D Fourth Amendment (correct)
- Why: The Fourth Amendment Act, 1975, established a presidential form of government, introduced a one-party system (BAKSAL), and curtailed judicial independence, fundamentally transforming the state structure.*
- 2 Following independence, the Awami League government under Sheikh Mujibur Rahman embarked on a massive nationalization program. Which of the following sectors was not among the primary targets for nationalization in the immediate post-independence period?
- A Jute industry
 - B Textile mills
 - C Banking and insurance
 - D Small-scale private retail (correct)
- Why: The nationalization drive primarily targeted large-scale industries (jute, textiles, sugar), banking, and insurance, aiming to establish state control over key economic sectors. Small-scale private retail was generally left untouched.*
- 3 Mujibbad, the state ideology proclaimed by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, comprised four core principles. Which of these principles, in its practical application during the early 1970s, led to significant state control over the economy and a planned economic framework?
- A Nationalism
 - B Democracy
 - C Socialism (correct)
 - D Secularism
- Why: Socialism, as one of the four pillars of Mujibbad, directly mandated state ownership and control over key industries and financial institutions, leading to extensive nationalization and a planned economic approach.*

4 The socialist economic policies pursued in early independent Bangladesh faced severe challenges. Which of the following was a significant economic consequence attributed, in part, to the nationalization drive and state-controlled economy during the 1972-1975 period?

- A Rapid industrial diversification
- B Sustained high foreign direct investment
- C Widespread shortages and black markets (correct)
- D Significant reduction in income inequality

Why: The extensive nationalization, bureaucratic inefficiencies, lack of managerial expertise, and corruption often led to production shortfalls, supply chain disruptions, and the proliferation of black markets for essential goods.

5 During its initial socialist phase, Bangladesh's foreign policy under Sheikh Mujibur Rahman often leaned towards specific international blocs. Which major global power was a significant political and economic ally of Bangladesh during this period, reflecting its socialist orientation?

- A United States
- B People's Republic of China
- C Soviet Union (correct)
